PREPARING FOR FINAL EXAMS!

Hey Forbes! Time sure does fly by here at Princeton. Final exam season and the end of another academic year are already just around the corner. Here are a few tips I have to help you do your best on final exams:

- First and foremost, know where and when your exams take place. All of the final exam times and locations can be found on your homepage of TigerHub or the Registrar's website at <https://regroxen.princeton.edu/final-exams/schedule/>.
- Prioritize your study materials. With some tests at the beginning of exam period and others at the very end, it's important to allocate study time in an efficient manner. If you expect one subject's test to be more difficult, try your best to spend enough time preparing each day for that one.
- Clarify with the professor what kind of test to expect and the information covered. If you feel unsure of the format or the professor's intentions, don't be afraid to ask them in office hours or send them an email. It's better to ask early than encounter a complete surprise during the exam.
- Find friends in the class to study with. Taking a test at Princeton is not supposed to be a competition. Everyone has something that they understand from the class and questions about another topic. A study group is one way to get your questions answered in a more casual setting while helping your friends do well, too.
- Change up your study locations. A different environment and a change of scenery can help keep your mind alert and ready to study. Firestone C Level is nice, but so is Chancellor Green, Campus Club, and the Forbes patio on a sunny day!
- Don't stress out too much. While exams often count for a large part of your grade in a class, a difficult test is not the end of the world. Regardless of what you are able to produce in a few hours, you learned a lot during this past semester and should be proud of the hard work you put in! GOOD LUCK ON YOUR FINALS!!!!!!!!!!!!
